1. Health for Care - A Call for Social Care Reform in England

NAPC Chairman Minesh Patel, Member of the Health for Care coalition, co-signed a letter which calls on the government and parliamentarians to fix social care 'once and for all'.

In union with the #FixSocialCare campaign, the Health for Care coalition recently addressed a letter to the Prime Minister on the need for social care reform in England. The letter highlights the need for long-term funding settlement to stabilise the market, extended provision to support more people in the community, and integrated social care and healthcare services.

The pandemic has shown the first-hand unacceptable pressures experience by those working in the care sector and with a potential second wave of COVID-19, the letter is asking the Prime Minister to set out a timetable for reform which will address the immediate crisis and result in comprehensive legislative proposals to place the sector on sustainable footing.

2. Response received from Matt Hancock, re Shielding

A letter about Shielding concerns (the full version of which can be read here) was sent to Matt Hancock from our President, Dr Patricia Wilkie. In summary, the letter said:

- Can you assure us that shielded patients will be involved about the future of shielding and if not why not?
- Will you consider retaining shielding for the extremely vulnerable perhaps in a reduced format?
- Can you share with us the scientific evidence on which the decision to cease shielding was based?"

A response has now been received on 03 Sept 2020, shown below:

Dear Dr Wilkie,

Thank you for your correspondence of 2 July to Matt Hancock about shielding. I have been asked to reply and I apologise for the delayed response.

I understand the concerns you hold as President of the National Association for Patient Participation about the future of shielding.

I have relayed your questions to the Department's Shielding Policy Team, which has provided the following response.

1. Can you assure us that shielded patients will be involved in discussions about the future of shielding?

The Government has worked in collaboration with charities and patient groups as shielding advice has developed. Charities and patient groups have valuable insight into how Government advice is affecting people on the ground and engaging with them is a vital part of policy development. The Government is always looking at how it can improve the way it communicates any changes to shielding advice and guidance, and it is proactively engaging with stakeholders. If you would like find out more about how to engage with the Government on this issue please contact DHSCExternalAffairs@dhsc.gov.uk.

2. Can you inform us of the scientific evidence on which the decision to cease shielding is based?

All decisions on shielding guidance have been led by the Chief Medical Officer and based on clinical advice. On 10 June, the scientific evidence suggested there was a significantly reduced prevalence of COVID-19 in the community and that disease rates in the community were at pre-lockdown rates or lower. In addition, the test, track and trace programme had been launched, including within schools, and robust measures were in place to manage potential areas of higher risk. To those who were shielding, this meant that the chance of catching COVID-19, if the updated advice was followed, was very low.

The Government also considered the recognised clinical risks to mental and physical wellbeing from limited social and physical interaction, that might result while shielding advice is in place.

3. Will you consider retaining shielding for the extremely vulnerable, perhaps in a reduced format?

Shielding advice has currently been paused nationally due to the low level of prevalence of COVID-19 in the community. This means that the advice for the clinically extremely vulnerable has been brought in line with that of the general population. However, the shielded patient list is being maintained throughout this pause. If incidences of transmission increase, this will allow the Government to rapidly step up support again should this be needed. Shielding continues to be advised in some areas subject to local lockdown restrictions. The Government will continue to listen to its medical advisers on the level of clinical risk the virus presents to different groups of people at different points in time.

I hope this reply is helpful.

Yours sincerely,

Aymee Smith

3. Get involved in Self Care Week (16-22 Nov)

During these uncertain times, it is crucial that we do all we can for ourselves, our families, our patients and our colleagues to live as healthily as we can to keep up our resolve and to be able to cope with whatever new challenge comes our way.

Which is why the Self Care Forum, a charity aiming to further the reach of self care, is encouraging anyone with an audience to participate in this year's Self Care Week (16 – 22 November).

The theme, Live Self Care for Life, is particularly apt given the pandemic and the initiative is ideal to help people to not only protect themselves and others against a second wave, but as a reminder to take better care of their health and well-being more generally.

The aim of Self Care Week is to:

- Remind and reignite people's enthusiasm for social distancing, wearing masks, and improving their immunity through vitamin D supplements and by quitting smoking;
- Spread communications around nutrition and exercise given the link between coronavirus and obesity;

- Find ways to protect our mental well-being given everything we have been through as a nation this year.

To find out more, the Self Care Forum has developed a series of resources such as its 8-point plan, best practice and case studies which are all free to download from its website.
